

Jesus, look at me as I wake up, and then give me this gaze of Yours, so that in opening my eyes and gazing at You, I can look at You in Your will, and You can receive the happiness of being gazed upon by a divine gaze. Oh Jesus, let Your gaze inundate me with so much light that it completely transfuse us together, so that as my eyes open, the light of Your volition will shine forth from within them, so that I will never see anything else, but Your volition. And immersing myself in this immense light of Your will, together with You, I want to be: light to make You known to everyone, light to stop sin, light to make You loved, and light to make Your holy volition known to everyone as well.

My first thought rises and runs to You, oh Jesus, and kissing Your thoughts, it fuses in Your intelligence and takes life in Your will. And together with You, I want to radiate myself into the minds of all creatures to gather their first thoughts, and to give You the honor, the adoration, and the submission of them all to You. My Jesus in my first spoken word today, I intend to take all the harmonies of heaven, and bring them close to Your ears, so that they can resound within You. And You, my Jesus, unite my word to Your own, and receive it from me as Your word, so that You can hear the echo of a divine word coming from me, to soothe Your ears from all the annoying voices of creatures. And as my lips open to pronounce my first word, Jesus, let my voice run in Your will, and making Your will my own, I want to make my voice resound in every heart so that shaking them all to wake up, I can inflame with Your will the fire of Your love in them. Then gathering together all the creature's wills, as if they were one alone, I want to give You in the name of everyone, divine love, divine glory, and divine reparation.

Oh, my Jesus, my weak nature is ready to act, and at the same time I am just so incapable, that I cannot do anything. But I get life in the ability to act from Your will, and since Your volition is the life and movement of all creatures, I want to act in Your will and be the thought of every creature; so that they will all understand; I want to be the light of their eyes so that they will only look to heaven; the voice of their mouths, so that they will detest sin and always praise You; the work of their hands to direct everything they do to You; the steps of their feet to enchain them, so no one can fall into hell; the heartbeat of their heart so that they would love only You. Oh, my Jesus, may Your volition fill everyone and, in Your volition, I want all creatures to take advantage of Your every benefit that they possibly can, as if all of them had done their act in Your will.

Fiat